MILWAUKEE RULED BY POLISH WOMEN

LAWLESSNESS IN THE CREAM CITY TODAY.

Last Night's Scene Repeated-Mobs of Women Drive Away Municipal Health Officers With Clubs-Authorities Surrender-Epidemic May Result-News of the Northwest.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Aug. 30.—The women in the smallpox infected district ran riot unchecked yesterday. Quarantine officers were driven from the houses which they were guarding and no attempts have been made to sheck the infuriated mobs. These women seem to be organized and are determined to resist all efforts of the health department to remove patients or quarantime affected houses. The women are all armed with baseball bats and wear white caps. About 400 paraded through Fifteenth, Sixteenth and Seventeenth avenues and drove the quarantine officers from their posts. At 2 o'clock in the afternoon the health department temporarily abandoned the attempt to quarantine and remove patients to the isolation hospital or to investigate new cases in the Eleventh ward. Even | been. the patients from other sections of the city were not removed because it was feared the ambulence would be wrecked when it passed through the ward on its way to the isolation hospital.

B. F. LANDIS A CROOK AND A CUTE ONE TOO

MAN ARRESTED AT OSHKOSH.

Charged With Horse Stealing at Canton, Ohio, Ten Years Ago and Sawing His Way Out of Jail He Is Taken Back to the Buckeye State by the Sheriff.

B. F. Landis, who ran a wholesale cigar store on North Main street for some time and went from here to Oshkosh where he engaged in the same business, did not look like a desperate crook, and when he walked Janesville streets nobody dodged into dark stairways for fear of personal injury.

He's in jail though. He was arrested at Oshkosh yesterday for horse stealing in Ohio eight and the public generally, there are years ago. The arrest was made by sheriffs from Stark county and Drake county, Ohio, on suthority of the Anti-Horse Thies societies of those counties. It is claimed that Landis was convicted of horse stealing at Canton and after serving two terms for the same offense, sawed his way out of the Greenville, Ohio, jail. Then he disappeared, and while he was in Janesville he kept his whereabouts dark. He left here some time ago and has been in Oshkosh since. The people of that town had no suspicion that he was a fugitive from justice. He had a wife there, but it is said he also has a wife and family in Ohio. He was taken to Greenville yesterday and the officers are still looking for a female accomplice.

Landis a Desperate Thief,

According to the statements of the officers from Ohio, Landis is one of the most desperate and notorious horse thieves that ever pursued his profession in that state. In 1884 Landis was arrested in Darke county for horse stealing. While confined in the county jail awaiting trial, he escaped by sawing the bars of his cell, after only thirty days' confinement. Search was immediately instituted for him, but no trace was found until 1886 when it was discovered that he was in the Ohio state prison serving a five years' sentence for horse stealing committed in Canton, in tobacco almost ready to harvest. The Stark county. The officials of Darke plants, Connecticut Havana, were set county intended to re-arrest him on the first of June, and not withstandfor the remainder of his term. Steel Knuckles In His Pocket.

When Landis was searched a very deadly steel knuckle was found in his pocket. He said to an Oshkosh reporter that he was forty-five years of age, having been born in Ohio in bit of baking powder." 1849. After teaching school for a number of years the tobacco business engaged his attention. In March of 1892 he came to Janesville and opened a cigar and tobacco store remaining here for two years and a half, until his removal to Oshkosh. He has been married twice, and was wedded to his present wife who was an Ohio girl three years ago. At present his wife and two children are in this city visiting with a daughter by his former wife. Landis says that he is a member of Janesville branch No. 90, of the I. O. O. F., and to substantiate his statement he displayed the insignia of the order. When asked why he carried such weapons, as knuckles, he said: "I have been to Portage on a business trip and got off at Minnesota Junction to walk around, when I found them and put them in my pocket. I had not been in my store two minutes before my arrest followed, and consequently I never thought of removing them."

Identified by a Traveling Man,

Landis is of slight build, dark hair and piercing black eyes and weighs about 130 pounds. He is a fluent talker and is evidently well educated.

The Ohio men accompanied by Landis left on the 3:46 train yesterday afternoon.

It has been learned that an Ohio traveling man identified Landis, while traveling through this state, and upon receiving proof, requisition papers sent for their man.

We are Selling Dry Goods Cheap.

REMOVAL!

On or about November 1 we shall remove our Dry Goods business into the Sutherland block on the bridge. We shall double our capacity, we shall largely increase our stock in all departments. In the mean time we are grinding out bargains at the old stand. We just placed on sale 3 Cases of New Dark Calicoes in remnants. They are beautiful patterns and the same low price still takes. We have just received 40 patterns of those French novelties, the popular dress fabric for fall.

JUST OPENED 100 doz. more of those beautiful Swiss Embroidered Handkerchiefs still going at the bargain price. Our buyer is at present in the eastern markets look-gin for bargains and inside of two weeks we shall have $40,000 worth of new stuff, all bought for cash and with this idea uppermost in our mind,

BUY CHEAP, SELL CHEAP.

We are the firm that proposes to hammer down the prices. We propose to give the people Dry Goods Cheap. Other firms may ignore our prices; they may call us "little fellows." But when you come down to the cold business facts, we are buying dry goods cheap and we are selling them cheap. You know it, we know it and we want everybody to know it. You can come to us for dry goods and buy them right.

ECHO OF "PARTY PERFIDY" After all this shilly-seallying does anybody really justify Mr. Cleveland for letting the tariff bill become a law without his signature? What the president expected to gain by refusing to sign the bill is hard to say. By allowing it to become a law without his signature he is as much responsible for it as he would be if he signed it. What a man can prevent, and does not, he must be held accountable for. For fear that some may have forgotten the president's opinion of the bill in its present form, and as it will be admitted to the conference, falls far short of the consummation for which we have long labored, for which we have suffered defeat without discouragement, which in its anticipation gave us a rallying cry in our day

I will take the lead!" gage, terrorizing the sounds and rivers of North Carolina until brave Cushing sent her to the bottom with a torpedo, the only one of the three formidable ironclad rams | nates not another exploded. Farragut's The Merrimac and the Arkansas committed suicide, as it were, in order to escape the shame of capture—that is, they were abandoned and blown up by their commanders. Both ran their careers in 1862, drove them to it. They were lacking in yards, in shops, in machinery and material for constructing a navy to compete old way.

The simply causing the ram to lurch a trifle. last named, having but one entrance, suffered the most from the blockade, and early in 1864 the Confederates set to work to raise it by means of a powerful ram. Admiral Buchanan, the commander of the Merrimac in the Hampton Roads battle, was then at the head of naval affairs in Mobile bay. Other officers of the first ram skill and experience to the building of a new monster, the Tennessee, with the express purpose of dashing into Farragut's blockading squadron and putting an end still served under him and devoted their skill and experience to the building of a new monster, the Tennessee, with the express purpose of dashing into Farragut's blockading squadron and putting an end to it. But about the time the ram got ready for business Farragut brought up four ironclads from the Mississippi, and placing them at the head of his fleet of wooden ships of war set sail for the bay, intending to knock to pieces the forts and intending to knock to pieces the forts and slighter vessels defending the city before the famous ram, of which he had heard, could come to the rescue. The battle of Mobile Bay, Aug. 5, 1864, was the result.

The hull of the ram Tennessee had been constructed the previous winter on the wooded bluffs along the Alabama river above Selma. Her machinery and battery were placed in a' Mobile, and at the same time her monstrous shield received a plating of iron. She was modeled upon the Merrimac and resembled her very much when lying in the water. Her hull, 209 feet long, was surmounted amidships by a shield made of alternate layers of yellow pine and white oak plank 25 inches thick, extending at an angle of 45 degrees from below the water over her batteries, engines and quarters. The planking in the shield was eight feet in length. Over it, when completed, she carried six inches of plating in three layers bolted through the thick wooden backing. Her guns, six in number, were mounted in sponsons projecting from the sides of the shield. Her battery was light, consisting of four 4 inch rifles in broadside and two 7½ inch rifles in pivot fore and aft. Her strength lay in her iron armor and in her massive spur or ram. This arm was constructed by bending her planking and plating, shortened to about six feet, at a sharp angle all around her bow. Had other things been equal the armor and iron beak would have made the Tennessee the most powerful of all the dreaded rams of the Confederacy. Owing to an accident, she was deprived of the chance of surprising the blockading fleet and spreading havoe among the vul-nerable wooden boats, as the Merrimac and Arkansas had done before her. She was carried over the bar at the mouth of the Alabama on "camels" during the night, but before the "camels" could be detached the tide fell, and she grounded.

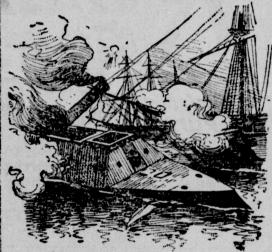

Daylight revealed her to the blockading fleet, and after that surprise was out of the question. She took her station in the bay for the protection of Mobile, and when Farragut sailed up on the 5th of August struments was sent up a distance of 10 became the flagship of the defensive fleet. This fleet comprised, besides the ram, three side wheel wooden boats, and the whole armament numbered but 22 guns. Farragut commanded 18 ships, including four monitors, mounting 190 cannon and my fleet of Buchanan must be reckoned with before the great admiral could have full swing in Mobile bay. The entrance is a channel three miles wide, inclosed by and an awful big storm should come work, which the Confederates had strengthened by sand bags and an armament of three tiers of guns. Alongside, at the watery of seven guns, and on the opposite side of the channel erected a new work, known as Fort Gaines. Three miles up the channel, on the west side, a third work,

Fort Powell, commanded the inner bay. The fleet, led by the monitors, steamed up opposite Fort Morgan, firing as they passed and receiving the full complement lost caste when of Fort Morgan's guns in return. Suddenly the leading monitor, the Tecumseh, I was away? careened and sank, and those following slowed up in anticipation of a similar fate. The bay was planted with torpedoes, and ton Roads, but the the Tecumseh, driven hastily, if not reckfate of their first lessly, by her commander when he saw a chance to close with the Tennessee, had the Confederates chanced upon one. She carried down over from the field by 100 officers and men. The mishap to the any means. The Tecumseh brought the whole line of monitors and gunboats to a standstill directly in range of the guns of Fort Morgan and the enemy's vessels lying near just around the bend of the bar. The wooden ships suffered terribly under that fire, and their scuppers literally "ran blood."

In order to get above the smoke which a veritable "sea devil," while the second hung around the decks of his flagship Farragut climbed into the rigging, where he was lashed to the ratlines by some of the men. Finding that the vessels in the lead were timid about going ahead, he ordered the flagship Hartford on at full speed, short yet dashing career she ran amuck, passing the other vessels, monitors and cutting her way through two of the best all, and when a voice cried to him from equipped Union fleets in the Mississippi, the decks of the halting ships to beware and her antagonists were glad to let her of torpedoes he roared out: "Damn the tor-

The latter were quickly disposed of by the Union vessels, and the entire fleet having passed beyond range of the forts the fight lay between the Tennessee and the reand two years passed before the Confed- | maining 17 ships, which cast off their erates had the temerity to revive this lashings and steamed after the ram. The method of naval warfare. Desperation Tennessee followed up the Hartford with the best speed possible. That was only six knots, for her engines were imperfect secondhand ones taken from a river steamwith Uncle Sam's, but they had standing er. The challenge of the plucky ram was timber and old scrap iron in abundance accepted by the Union vessels indiscriminal stout willing hands to grapple with the task of building rude ships in the slow speed, struck amidships without damaging the monster in the least, but losing her The fight of the south against Union own iron prow and cut water in the col-

but the shot rolled off from her plated shield, searcely leaving a dent. At the same time the ram sent a 95 pound shot through the Hartford, killing and wounding 13 men.

It had been Farragut's purpose in this attack to drive the flagship upon the low protruding decks of the ram. The wooden hull of the Hartford would of course be crushed in the encounter, but with a hold full of water she would weigh down the Tennessee and send her to the bottom. The eagerness of the ram to avoid the blow made it the more evident that the plan was feasible, and Farragut ordered his ship forward the second time, but the Lack-awanna came steaming up on the same hazardous errand and cut into the Hartford amidships, knocking two portholes into one, upsetting a heavy Dahlgren and completely demoralizing nearly all on board. Undaunted, the admiral ordered his ship ahead again, but the Lackawan no which had backed off came up on the his ship ahead again, but the Lackawan-na, which had backed off, came up on the other side and barely escaped giving the flagship a second blow.

As the Tennessee backed off from the Hartford she dropped into the midst of the fleet, a target for 100 guns, whose concentrated shots began to tell on her vulnerable parts. Her flagstaff disappeared and the smokestack also. Her heavy iron port shutters, the second weak point in her construction, became jammed by the heavy solid shots rained upon them and could not be opened to run out the guns for firing. Admiral Buchanan and the pilot had been wounded, and as a finishing disaster the rudder chains, which were exposed on the deck, were cut in two by an 11 inch shot from the monitor Chickasaw, which had hung close under the stern of the ram from the beginning of the fight.

The Tennessee soon drifted helplessly upon the strong tide. The Hartford, Lackawanna, Monongahela and Ossipee, cach on different quarters, steamed at her full speed, while the monitor Chickasaw pounded away at her stern.

Suddenly the cannonading ceased, and its echoes died away amid the cheers of the sailors of the whole fleet. The Tennessee had struck her colors to the Ossipee.

Not a single shot had passed through her shields, and only one had punctured the wooden backing underneath the armor. Her loss was only two killed and nine wounded, and had her machinery and apparatus been as effective as her shield the battle of Mobile Bay might have had a different ending. The surrender of the forts soon followed that of the ram. GEORGE L. KILMER.

THE GOLD FEVER.

A Remembrance of the Days When It First Struck California.

"I was a resident of San Francisco in 1848 when the gold fever struck that part of the country," said Matthew L. Farrell, one of the pioneers of California, "and it seemed as though all the people went wild with excitement. As soon as it became known that gold had been discovered. men hastened to sell their real estate and merchandise that they might obtain means to journey to the gold diggings. Row boats worth $50 were sold for $500 to those wishing to sail up the bay into the Sacramento river. The price of shovels and picks jumped from $1 to $10. Stores were rummaged for bottles, vials and brass tubes to hold the gold when found.

"In less than two months San Francisco was as if swept by a pestilence; three-fourths of the male population had gone to the mines. Real estate dropped fully one-half in value, and the same happened to all merchandise not used in the mines. Labor rose tenfold in price. Negro waiters received $10 a day and cooks $15, but even such wages as these could not indnce the eager gold-seekers to remain in the city. Nearly everyone went to try his luck. Some made their fortunes, but many came back a good deal poorer than when they started."

dollar. We are after the shining shekels and we expect to get 'em by giving value for them. We don't want them on any other terms. Come and see us and you will find us Death on the Dicker. We take no man's dust on the track.. We won't be bluffed out of the business game. Our highest aim has alwas been to fit everybody with ready-to-wear clothing.

WE HAVE STRUCK IT AT LAST.

The Pickwick Clothing fills the bill. Never before have we been able to offer as fine fitting for oddsized men at the prices we will make on the Pickwicks. We are now fixed to stay in the game.

MONDAY WILL BE PICKWICK OPENING DAY.

PICKWICK CLOTHING PARALYZES the high-priced merchant tailor. We can fit anybody, no difference what shape, equally as good as they will after taking your measure, and give you just as good a Largest line Boy's Combination Suits suit of clothes for at least $10 less. It is foolish to have any merchant tailor in the city make your clothes, in the city for school. while Pickwicks are on hand. Perfection in fitting clothes to odd-sized men is now reached. Come in On display Pickwick Monday, let us try.

New Tariff! New Prices! New Goods!

IS A COMBINATION HARD TO BEAT.

While competitors are CRYING dull times we are overrun with business. Last week's sales were most gratifying and will never be forgotten by our numerous customers who have fortunately purchased some of our bargains. Our Mr. Kimball has just returned from the east where he purchased carload after carload of the most beautiful funiture ever offered for sale and the beauty of the whole deal is he purchased it at his own price.
